

Fiber Optic Cable Unlocking Tool

Article Overview

Fiber optic cable unlocking tools are specialized instruments designed to safely access, strip, and prepare optical fibers for splicing, termination, or testing without damaging the delicate glass strands.

Overview of Fiber Optic Unlocking Tools

Fiber optic cables are composed of fragile silica glass fibers protected by multiple layers, including an outer jacket, buffer coatings, and sometimes Kevlar for tensile strength. Unlocking these cables requires precision tools to remove protective layers and gain access to the internal fibers without introducing microfractures or signal loss .

Mid-Span Slit and Ring Tools

Mid-span tools, such as the MS-446 Mid Span Slit & Ring Tool, allow technicians to quickly access the interior fibers of thick-walled cables (8.7-14.6 mm diameter) without cutting the entire cable . These tools are ideal for heavy-duty outdoor cables and enable efficient splicing or patching at specific points along the cable.

Fiber Strippers

Fiber strippers are used to remove protective coatings from optical fibers. They come in manual tri-hole strippers for field work and automatic thermal strippers for manufacturing environments. High-precision strippers can remove multiple layers, including the outer jacket, 900 μm buffer, and 250 μm acrylate coating, while leavin...
