

Price List of Copper-Clad Aluminum Fiber Optic Cable Manufacturers

Article Overview

Copper-clad aluminum (CCA) fiber optic cables currently range around USD 5,500 per metric ton in APAC markets, with prices varying by region, supplier, and production method.

Current Pricing Overview

- In North America, the CCA price index has risen modestly due to tight supply and stable industrial demand, with spot prices firming and contract volumes prioritized. Prices are influenced by energy tariffs, scrap copper costs, and infrastructure spending .
- In APAC, the average CCA price was approximately USD 5,549/MT, with quarterly increases driven by export demand, freight premiums, and higher imported ingot costs .
- Wholesale suppliers in China offer competitive pricing, often with bulk discounts and customization options. Prices fluctuate daily due to raw material costs, including copper and aluminum, and fiber optic components .

Factors Affecting Price

- Production Method:
- Cladding: Copper and aluminum atoms fuse at the microscopic level, producing high shear strength (>70 MPa) and long-term reliability.
- Electroplating: Copper ions are deposited onto aluminum surfaces; less integrated bonding can reduce durability under stress ....
